COURSE CONTENT

Outcomes and Objectives:

By the end of this course the Student will be able to:

1. Critique representative elements of popular culture.
2. Relate works to the historical or cultural context of the United States.
3. Address theoretical or analytical issues relevant to the understanding the meaning of and dynamic interactions between race, ethnicity and gender in the United States.
4. Participate in multicultural activities outside of class by attendance at museums, lectures, forums, performances, films, poetry readings etc., as well as scheduled field trips.
5. Demonstrate in writing the ability to critique, analyze, compare and contrast, to weigh arguments, to examine values, and to integrate materials from several disciplines.
6. Demonstrate the ability to access information regarding popular culture on the Internet or in computerized formats.

Topics and Scope:

1. The course will focus on works of popular culture (popular is defined as "appealing to or intended for the public at large" or "adapted to the tastes, means, etc. of ordinary persons"). These might include such things as film, television, comic books, popular fiction, celebrations or rituals (such as Mardi Gras), theme parks, public murals, illustrations, graffiti art, sporting events, advertising, and objects for popular consumption.

2. The course will provide a theoretical framework for students to enable them to critique the works selected. This framework may be constructed through the use of written texts or other materials which offer approaches to understanding popular culture.
3. The course will focus on the 20th century, but may use materials from earlier times to establish historical background or continuity.
4. The course will explore the experiences and cultural expressions of at least three of the following six racial or ethnic groups in the United States: African American, American Indian, Asian American, Chicano/Latino, European American, and Americans of Middle Eastern origin.
5. In addition, the course may examine how issues of class, sexual orientation, age, religion, or disability impact cultural expression or cultural participation in the United States.
6. Works will be studied within the cultural context of the United States; however, influences and developments may be traced into other countries.
7. The course may be structured either thematically or chronologically.
8. The course may be team taught or supplemented by lectures or presentations from a variety of disciplines related to the study of American cultures.

Assignment:

1. Careful reading and analysis of assigned texts, including non-literary texts.
2. Examinations, including quizzes, mid-term, final, and/or take-home exam.
3. Written essays requiring the student to analyze representative works of popular culture.
4. Written essays requiring the students to compare and contrast; examine ideas, values, beliefs, and experiences; question assumptions (their own and others); and integrate two or more disciplines.
5. Participation in cultural activities, including museum visits, concerts, poetry readings, lectures, and (optional) field trips.
6. Creative projects (optional depending on instructor).
7. Internet research and on-line assignments.
