COURSE CONTENT

Outcomes and Objectives:

The aim of this course is designed to present a chronological survey of French literature in English translation so that students having little or no knowledge of French can appreciate French literary masterpieces. The 39/39A courses will cover the period from the year 1100 to the French Revolution. It will primarily focus on complete works by major French authors who are universally known and whose writings still have considerable relevance to Twentieth Century readers.

The main focus of the course will be on the works themselves as literature, and lectures will aim at helping students to understand and appreciate works read. Students will be encouraged to ask questions and to share and critique each other's ideas to class discussions.

The instructor will try to show what is specifically "French" (as well as universal) in French literature and to foster a sensitivity to ideas and values within a culture that is in many respects very different from their own.

Topics and Scope:

The course will provide an introduction to each historical period so that students can understand the context within which the various authors wrote. Students will be made familiar with the main social, political, and artistic trends of each period, and these will be related to such questions as the author's motivations in writing and the content and style of his or her works. Significant biographical details will be provided for each author.

There will be three tests (one on each of the first three chapters) as well as a final (cumulative, but with an emphasis on the final time period). The tests will contain an initial factual component (multiple choice, quote identification, brief informational questions). This will test the student's knowledge of historical background, author's biographies, and the contents of works read. A second part will consist of several essay questions which will allow students to exercise their critical abilities by analyzing and interpreting aspects of works that have been read.

Assignment:

Students will write four papers, one on each historical period covered. Papers should be clearly organized and should show an ability to think critically and to support thesis with reason and arguments. Students should be able to analyze an author's main themes and show some sensitivity to nuances of style.
