Outcomes and Objectives:

The students will:

1. Record in-class lecture notes and relate that information to the textbook.
2. Define terms, identify economic institutions, and relate economic principles to practical and political problems.
3. Recognize economic problems and discuss issues using economic principles to explain their reasoning.
4. Voluntarily express their points of view during in-class discussions.
5. Apply their knowledge of economic principles and institutions, not only within the context of academic assignments, but also in their everyday lives where working, spending and saving decisions are concerned.
6. Practice the application of economic models to specific problems both real and hypothetical.
7. Calculate mathematical solutions and diagram economic models.
8. Demonstrate communication and analytical skill levels on examinations and in-class discussions.
9. Question their own values and popular myths as well as conventional economic hypothesis.
10. Synthesize the ideas of economists and (from the synthesis) formulate their own perceptions of how best to address the fundamental economic questions of what, how and for whom.

11. Assess the nation's economic performance from a microeconomic perspective and evaluate the efficiency of microeconomic policies directed toward the achievement of economic goals.
12. Research, organize information and data, and write a term paper on a current issue related to economics (optional and pertaining to above average and outstanding students).
