COURSE CONTENT

Outcomes and Objectives:

From a prescribed selection of European Literature relevant to the period of the Ancient World through The Renaissance, (critical studies may also be included) students will:

1. Analyze and critique assigned texts.
2. Recognize and define the evolutionary stages of and the variety of forms used in the development of European Literature.
3. Identify major themes in the period as a whole.
4. Evaluate and classify various themes relating to the time period and culture.
5. Recognize and interpret the variety of forms in which European Literature exists.
6. Recognize the most influential writers of early Western Civilization.

Topics and Scope:

1. The Ancient World.
 - A. Egyptian, Hebraic and other early religious writings: the origins and uses of literature.
 - B. Homer: heroic values and literature.
 - C. Greek tragedy: the classical age in Greece, and the origins of Western theater.
 - D. Virgil, Ovid: Roman epic, heroic and fabulist.
 - E. Love songs: from the Greek, by Sappho and Alcaeus; from Latin, by Catullus and Horace; from the modern era; also, perhaps, from Manyoshu.
 - F. Early Christian meditational and didactic writings: New Testament, St. Augustine.
2. The Middle Ages.
 - A. Icelandic Saga.

- B. Medieval Romance.
 - C. Dante: the medieval world view, and the birth of vernacular literature.
 - D. Tale Cycles: Boccaccio.
3. The Renaissance.
- A. Love poetry: Petrarch.
 - B. Didactic and descriptive literature revelatory of the values and modes of the time: Machiavelli, Castiglione.
 - C. Ribald tales and the new questioning of tradition: Rabelais.
 - D. Cervantes: the ironic-herioc view of human institutions.

Note on Range of Topics and on Multicultural Literacy - The above list of authors and topics includes both too much and too little. There is too much literature to be treated adequately in seventeen weeks; instructors are expected to make a representative but robust selection. There are too few topics to give an adequate idea of the range of possible approaches the faculty may bring to the course.

Assignment:

1. Regular reading assignments.
2. Notebook or other written preparation for class.
3. Class discussions and group work, in which each student is expected to participate.
4. Occasional leading of class discussions, and preparation appropriate to this task.
5. Carefully composed papers of 500 to 2,500 words, including research, that interpret the course texts or expound their cultural contexts.
6. Library research into historical backgrounds or critical response to the course texts.
7. Oral readings or other performance exercises.
8. Examinations and quizzes involving the writing of reasoned interpretive arguments as well as simple factual responses.
9. Attentive, critical viewing of video material illustrative of course texts.
