COURSE CONTENT

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the conclusion of this course, the student should be able to:

1. Analyze the multiple impacts of culture, gender, race and societal systems on young children's identity and social development.
2. Analyze various aspects of children's experience as members of families targeted by social bias, and consider the significant role of education in reinforcing or contradicting such experiences.
3. Compare and contrast diverse cultural values and parenting practices, taking into account knowledge of one's culture and practices.
4. Demonstrate an understanding of the professional's role as an advocate for constructive social change for children and families.

Objectives:

Students will be able to:

1. Compare historical and current perspectives of diversity and inclusion and their impacts on children's identity development and learning.
2. Explore and define their own cultural backgrounds and social identities including language, ethnicity, religion, immigration and socio-economic class.
3. Explain the nature of systemic and internalized privilege and oppression.
4. Develop and implement strategies to counter the overt and covert ways in which stereotypes, discriminatory behavior, and prejudice are learned.
5. Understand diverse cultural values and parenting practices in order to work more effectively with children and families.
6. Analyze contemporary educational practices and environments for cultural sensitivity.
7. Demonstrate ability to negotiate cultural conflicts among families, teachers, children, and administrators in early childhood settings.
8. Utilize classroom environments, materials, and interactions that effectively promote each child's identity, as well as delight and respect for diversity.
