COURSE CONTENT

Outcomes and Objectives:

UPON COMPLETION OF THIS COURSE, STUDENTS WILL BE ABLE TO:

- ë Identify central themes and concerns of the writers studied.
- ë Articulate the political, psychological, social, and cultural issues that inform the literature.
- ë Analyze the effects of the literary techniques used in the works.
- ë Compose coherent written analyses of chosen works.
- ë Evaluate the merit, power, and significance of each work in comparison to other works and on its own terms..

Topics and Scope:

The following presents a sample of the five possible ethnic traditions. There might be minor adjustment in topics with a different selection of ethnic traditions.)

EUROPEAN AMERICAN

1. First-generation experiences and the literature they have spawned.
2. Old-country backgrounds: escape from persecution (religious, political, cultural, racial), customs of ethnic cohesion, folklore, relevant history (political or demographic), religion.
3. Adaptation to American economic, cultural, and political conditions.
4. Reception by earlier arrivals from other ethnic groups (racism, ethnic conflict, competition for work, stereotyping).
5. Second- and third-generation experiences and the literature they have spawned (rejection of one's ethnic traditions; rediscovery of them; rising fortunes within American society; etc.)
6. Contemporary experiences and the literature they have spawned.

ASIAN AMERICAN

1. First-generation experiences and the literature they have spawned.
2. Old-country backgrounds: escape from persecution (religious, political, cultural, racial), customs of ethnic cohesion, folklore, relevant history (political or demographic), religion.
3. Adaptation to American economic, cultural, and political conditions.
4. Reception by earlier arrivals from other ethnic groups (racism, ethnic conflict, competition for work, stereotyping).
5. Second- and third-generation experiences and the literature they have spawned (rejection of one's ethnic traditions; rediscovery of them; rising fortunes within American society; etc.)
6. Contemporary trends in Asian American literature.

NATIVE AMERICAN

1. Ancient Tales and Traditions: creation myths, the oral tradition.
2. Tribal culture, backgrounds: differences among various tribal traditions and how they show up in key tales and tale-telling traditions. Elements of culture shared among tribes (depending on specific region selected).
3. The Coming of the White Man, and the Literature It Spawned (approx. 1790-1890).
4. Adaptation to European American cultural traditions: Indian poetry, tales and fiction that adopt features of the European written literary tradition (approx. 1850-present). Relevant economic, cultural, political and educational backgrounds.
5. Recent and contemporary trends in Native American literature.

AFRICAN AMERICAN

1. Slave narratives.
2. Folk traditions.
3. Harlem Renaissance.
4. The evolution of Black American identity via literature.
5. Contemporary trends in African American literature.

LATINO AMERICAN

1. Forms of expression peculiar to the Latino experience.
2. Political, cultural, historical, aesthetic phenomenon in Latino American literature.
3. Old World vs. New World perspectives.
4. The Chicano literary tradition.
5. Contemporary trends in Latino American literature.

SYNTHESIS

Comparisons of at least three selected ethnic literatures: similarities and differences in the issues that inform and motivate them; differences in point of view on "the American Dream" and other American culture concepts; differences in literary technique—narrative structure, style, preference of one genre over another, etc.—and possible reasons for such differences.

Assignment:

Students will do regular reading (up to 50 pages per class session) and they will prepare for quizzes and exams by means of class discussion, group work, research projects, and (depending on instructor and opportunity) visits to museums, cultural sites or events, and literary lectures or readings. Cultural and historical background will also be provided through lecture and selective reading. (I.e. the course envisions background readings in history, anthropology and the social sciences, in addition to the primary reading of literary masterpieces.) Students will also be asked to do close literary analysis of selected works--so as to appreciate the distinctive narrative and poetic characteristics of ethnic tradition.

Students should be prepared to expose their cultural biases and backgrounds orally and in writing, and to appreciate the ethnically-based views of others. A major component of the course will be classroom dialog among ethnic points of view.
