Catalog Description:

An introduction to human services in relation to human/personal development and need across the lifespan. The course identifies problems in living and their causes in the context of the human services profession. This involves a critical exploration of the history, standards and theoretical approaches to human service work and meeting peoples' needs. Psychological, physiological and social forces influencing the individual both as helper and client are examined. Students will study national and international welfare systems, the diverse populations served, and the legal, political and social issues that affect individuals within their community.
