COURSE CONTENT

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the conclusion of this course, the student should be able to:

1. Explain the historical and current realities of privilege and oppression, with members of the dominant culture and with members of oppressed groups, in order to demonstrate an understanding of the psychological consequences of both.
2. Analyze the theoretical concepts of social construction and social dominance as an explanation for discrimination and oppression.

Objectives:

Upon completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Examine the history of racial formations and social construction.
2. Evaluate major psychological theories on privilege, prejudice, and discrimination.
3. Distinguish what elements of social structure work to maintain systems of stratification based on constructions of difference.
4. Define and analyze the dimensions of racism, sexism, heterosexism, and classism.
5. Recognize patterns of ethnic relations, such as assimilation and pluralism.

6. Evaluate the systemic relationship between social class and ethnicity.
7. Examine the relationship of gender-based stereotypes to heterosexism.
8. Analyze patriarchy and the system of sexism.
9. Compare the consequences of racism, sexism, heterosexism, and classism on Native American, African American, Mexican/Latino, and Asian/Pacific Island American populations.
