COURSE CONTENT

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the conclusion of this course, the student should be able to:

1. Identify examples of American Indian traditional knowledge and counter narratives, and apply these to current socio-geopolitical issues, including racialization, equity, ethnocentrism, eurocentrism, settler colonialism, self-determination, liberation, decolonization, and anti-racism.
2. Research and analyze information from multidisciplinary sources and orientations to articulate knowledge of American Indian cultures with special focus on the lived-experiences and social struggles of American Indian peoples and nations.
3. Critically analyze the intersection of race as it relates to class, gender, sexuality, religion, spirituality, national origin, ability, tribal citizenship, sovereignty, language, and age in Native American communities.

Objectives:

In order to achieve these learning outcomes, during the course students will:

1. Identify North American Indian cultural geographic regions and differentiate related ecosystems.
2. Recognize exemplary groups within the cultural geographic regions and examine the similarities and differences between diverse tribes of Native America and people from other cultures, European, African, and Latina/Latino who have interacted with Native worldviews and knowledge.
3. Recognize and compare the importance and methods of language preservation in terms of relative cultural heritage traits.

4. Identify and recognize the persistence and diversity of American Indian cultures and the contributions that those diverse cultures have made to America.
5. Distinguish the cultural attributes borrowed from other peoples of the world by Native Americans with a focus on cultural exchange from the past to the present in North America.
6. Illustrate the application and significance of American Indian diversity in a global society.
7. Examine and compare relative attitudes about gender role, sexuality, age, social class, and division of labor in Native American communities.
8. Evaluate and apply American Indian multicultural/traditional perspective relative to socio-geopolitical issues.
9. Explore the relevance of socio-political issues such as, but not limited to, climate change, land sovereignty and sustainability, on Native America and the effect of Native American ideas on globalization.
10. Identify the current multidisciplinary and pedagogical approaches in American Indian Studies methods and theories.
11. Understand and enumerate the effects of age, gender, and social class on the interface between Native and non-Native as well as the challenges, opportunities, and innovations encountered by parties on both sides of those interchanges.

Ethnic Studies Objectives:

1. Analyze and articulate concepts such as race and racism, racialization, ethnicity, equity, ethno-centrism, eurocentrism, white supremacy, self-determination, liberation, decolonization, sovereignty, imperialism, settler colonialism, and anti-racism as analyzed in Native American Studies.
2. Apply theory and knowledge produced by Native American communities to describe the critical events, histories, cultures, intellectual traditions, contributions, lived-experiences and social struggles of those groups with a particular emphasis on agency and group-affirmation.
3. Critically analyze the intersection of race and racism as they relate to class, gender, sexuality, religion, spirituality, national origin, immigration status, ability, tribal citizenship, sovereignty, language, and/or age in Native American communities.
4. Critically review how struggle, resistance, racial and social justice, solidarity, and liberation, as experienced and enacted by Native Americans are relevant to current and structural issues such as communal, national, international, and transnational politics as, for example, in immigration, reparations, settler-colonialism, multiculturalism, language policies.
5. Describe and actively engage with anti-racist and anti-colonial issues and the practices and movements in Native American communities to build a just and equitable society.
