COURSE CONTENT

Outcomes and Objectives:

Upon completion of the course, the student will be able to:

1. Relate lecture materials, audio-visual presentations and textual readings into a coherent base for time study of (Mexican) history.
2. Distinguish between dogma and history, which is the analysis of a series of interpreted events.
3. Demonstrate critical thinking and analytical skills in a series of objective tests, written examinations and critical papers that probe Mexico's past.
4. Apply historical learning to in-class discussions of past controversies and contemporary concerns.
5. Integrate geographic knowledge with historical study--the study of human interaction transcends both space and time.
6. Identify and employ atypical and non-traditional pedagogy, to include lecture and textual source materials, such as literature, fiction, music, audio-visual and/or cinema and sport to study Mexican society and culture.
7. Examine the contributions of traditional societies, women, racial and ethnic groupings and other non-traditional groups so as to formulate a working knowledge of Mexican ideals and institutions.
8. Question own values and popular myths, as well as conventional historical analysis.
9. Synthesize the ideas of past and current historians and (from this synthesis) develop own means of addressing fundamental historical inquiry as to causation and consequence.
10. Debate the claim that the heritage and institutions of Mexico are, to some degree, unique and therefore underdeveloped, vis-a-vis the United States, and explore the causational rationale that underwrites this alleged uniqueness.

11. Conclude that informational and interpretive knowledge of our neighbor's history can be pragmatically employed in everyday life as an individual and as a citizen.
